

Isoil Industria - Conflict Minerals Policy

April 2016

The Dodd-Frank law enacted by the United States of America in August 2012 defines the applicable rules in relation to "Conflict Minerals" known also as '3TG' – Tantalum, Tin, Tungsten and gold.

As a result, many companies are now concentrating to identify if and to what extent conflict minerals contained in their products originate from the Democratic of Congo and or other countries cited in the law (Angola, Burundi, Central African Republic, Rwanda, Sudan, Tanzania, Uganda e Zambia).

Policy and commitment of ISOIL INDUSTRIA S.P.A.

The policy of Isoil industria is to make its customers aware that the minerals defined above if included in its products do not originate from one of the above listed countries and together with its supply chain partners seek to increase transparency concerning the traceability and origin of the minerals contained in its products.

Isoil Industria is committed to asking its suppliers to undertaken an adequate evaluation process with their supply chain to ensure the above specified minerals and metals do not originate from the interested countries.

In future, the willingness of our suppliers to conform to the initiative will be a determining factor in our purchasing decision.
